LOVE BEFORE LAW WITH GRAND JURY

Prison Doors Opened to Unite a Youthful and Affectionate Couple.

THEY'RE HAPPY AGAIN.

Grand Jury Declined to Enforce Geary's Amendment to the Penal Code.

Love was vindicated and the law was violated. Incidentally, a husband was released from jail that he might join his young and loving wife.

Last Fall Elbridge T. Gerry, of the Society for the Protection of Children, that is commonly known by his name, asked the Legislature to amend section 282 of the Penal Code that the age of consent of girls should be eighteen years. The law at that time fixed the age of consent at sixteen years.

The Legislature heeded the suggestion of Mr. Gerry, and passed an act amending the law in accordance with his proposal. That law, as amended, makes no exception of young women who marry. Yesterday the Grand Jury listened to the testimony in the first case prosecuted for violation of this statute. The prisoner was William E. Henshell.

Henshell is a gas fitter, twenty-two years old. At his trade he earns enough money to support a wife. He met Tessie Barnett at No. 425 East Seventeenth street, where she was employed as a laundress. She was a little older than sixteen years. The girl's mother opposed the match. The two young people went on the evening of September 11 to the residence of the Rev. Dr. Reilly, of St. Thomas' Chapel, and there were married.

When Mrs. Barnett learned of the marriage in her wrath she procured the arrest of her son-in-law, accusing him of felony for violation of the law that fixes the age of consent at eighteen years. Henshell was arrested on September 24 and by the Magistrate who heard the case was committed to the Tombs to await the action of the Grand Jury. Yesterday the Grand Jury considered the case.

The law is plain. The facts in the case were plain. The law applied to those facts. But the Grand Jurors deemed a law that would separate husband and wife under the conditions present both absurd and unwise. Accordingly they dismissed the case against the young gas fitter.

PRESIDENT LOW OPENS NEW COLUMBIA AND TENDERS HIS RESIGNATION.

President Low Welcoming Columbia's Students to Their New Home.

He Greeted the Student Body at the University Buildings on Morningside Heights, and Afterward Asks the Trustees to Relieve Him of the Presidency—Action on His Letter Deferred Until After the City Election.

In the huge white stone library building erected as a million dollar memorial to his father, Seth Low opened the one hundred and forty-fourth academic year of Columbia University yesterday. The new buildings on Morningside Heights, so far as completed, were crowded with students, alumni and visitors as early as 9 o'clock.

Half an hour later the religious exercises began. There was a procession of the president, faculty and the senior class moving slowly along through the aisles of the library, which was the hall of the library, Organist Dr. George W. Warren, of St. Thomas' Church, played the hymn "Amen."

The Rev. George R. Van De Water, rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, and chaplain of the University, officiated at the religious services. Bishop Potter had been expected to participate in these, but both he and his substitute, Rev. Morgan Dix, were absent.

Six students formed a choir, which sang the solo passages of the anthems, the choruses being sung by the assembled students, who numbered probably a thousand or more.

President Low said in part: "No attempt has been made to give this occasion anything but a simple and dignified character. The buildings and the grounds about them are just so far removed from completion as to make anything like a public function difficult. Therefore this is simply a home-coming for us. Every year I have had the pleasure of welcoming you back to your work after a summer of rest and refreshment. But this year it is an unexampled kindness to say to the men of Columbia: Welcome home."

President Low concluded by calling attention to the motto of the University—"In Thy Light We Shall See Light"—and spoke of the higher and religious significance of the words. The buildings that are ready for occupancy are as follows: The library, which will be utilized by the Law School and the School of Political Science; the Clives Building, which contains the Mathematical School; the Schermerhorn Building, which will house the School of Journalism; the Havemeyer Hall, in which are the schools of Chemistry, Architecture and Mineralogy; the Engineering Building, in which are classes for civil, mining, electrical and mechanical engineering. The main building—University Hall—is only partially finished.

President Low presented his resignation.

MORGAN'S SECRET SUIT.

An Injunction Will Prevent the Directors of a Rival Road to the South from Holding an Election.

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 4.—Saturday night, at Flat Rock, North Carolina, United States Judge Chas. H. Shumton, who has lately gained considerable reputation as an injunction granter in State railroad cases, granted another one, this time to restrain the majority stockholders of the Seaboard and Roanoke Railroad from voting their stock at the annual meeting of that company at Portsmouth to-morrow.

The Seaboard and Roanoke is the only road in the South that now competes with Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan's Southern Railway. Mr. Morgan, it is alleged, threatened to sue the Seaboard and Roanoke, and to bring the stock in a pool for mutual protection, has now enjoined this pooled stock from voting. The injunction was kept a pro-secution. The injunction was kept a pro-secution. The injunction was kept a pro-secution.

As the president of Columbia University at the meeting of the Board of Trustees after the formal opening of the institution. The trustees deferred action upon the resignation until after the city election.

The meeting, which was the first one of the academic year 1897-98, was held at the office of the Columbia University Corporation, No. 63 Wall street, owing to the unfinished condition of the trustees' room at Morningside Heights. The president and trustees met on the top floor; all others were requested to remain in the offices of Mr. John B. Pine, of the Executive Committee of the Citizens' Union, five floors below.

As they entered the hall of the library, Organist Dr. George W. Warren, of St. Thomas' Church, played the hymn "Amen."
